

7

Veterinary Equipment That Qualifies for Financing

1. Diagnostic Imaging Machines

You could spend thousands of dollars on digital x-ray machines, ultrasound systems, and other imaging tools, even for base models. That money doesn't have to come out of your pocket. Because these tools have long-term utility, retain their value, and are vital for accurate treatments, they're strong candidates for financing.

2. Surgical Equipment

The equipment used in surgery ranges from anesthesia machines to surgical lighting to operating tables. Your veterinary surgery center can't function without it. Lenders understand these assets' direct impact on patient outcomes and clinic revenue and frequently approve surgical equipment for funding.

3. Dental Units

Many clinics open a growing revenue stream through pet dental care. You can capitalize on that opportunity by financing dental chairs, ultrasonic scalers, and polishing units without straining your capital.

4. Laboratory Equipment

If you do in-house blood work or lab testing, your centrifuges and microscopes are all eligible. Lab tools increase your clinic's self-sufficiency and turnaround time, which lenders view favorably.

5. Exam Room Essentials

Keeping your exam room furnished and stocked can be expensive when you add up all the purchases. But even lenders know you can't function without the essentials. They often let vets bundle everything from examination tables and autoclaves to nail clippers and blood pressure cuffs into a financing package.

6. Practice Management Software and IT Infrastructure

You probably rely on software and technological tools to run your business. Some lenders will finance your IT infrastructure independently, while other providers might include it alongside clinical equipment. It depends on the funding company and software.

7. Kenneling and Boarding Equipment

If your clinic offers boarding or recovery spaces, financing often includes durable kennels, sanitation systems, patient monitoring equipment, and temperature-controlled environments.

Presented by:
Cardiff.co

cardiff

Image Source:
pexels.com
gemini.google.com (AI-generated)